

WHITE MAN HAD TO GIVE UP Jap Monopoly Foiled Bray Out of Honolulu Fishing Trade.

"Where is Bray, who had fish stall number one?"

A broad, very expansive grin covered the faces of a half dozen Japs and Chinese down in the Fishmarket. Business stopped in all the stalls while the yellow and brown men gathered around to see who was asking for Bray. They must have thought the reporter a second edition of Rip Van Winkle as Bray had almost been forgotten. Then between loud guffaws and hearty laughs, a Chinaman said:

"Blay—he no fish now. We too muchy for him. No white face fisherman here now. Blay go away on ship."

This was true. The lone Tankee fisherman who endeavored to break in to the Chinese and Japanese monopoly in the fishing business here had been promptly squelched. Bray came here with money, got fishing boats, employed a steam launch and promised to shake things up generally in the fishing trade.

But the Jap monopoly which controls ninety per cent of the fishing business was too strong. Bray depended upon his own strength to do his fishing and although the native is a good fisherman the Jap can walk all around him when it comes to bringing in the fish cheaply. Bray's men brought in but few fish and these cost him much more than the same class of fish cost the Jap. When Bray had his fish on the stall the Japs put the prices down to a ruinous level and of course the lone American had to drop his to the same point. Then Jap agents would quickly buy up the supply and the price of fish on all the Jap and Chinese stalls would go up at once. Those who had become regular customers of the American could not get their supply after such a maneuver and Bray would be unable to replenish his stock by buying of his "brother" Jap fish merchants. They absolutely refused to sell to him at any price and after a battle lasting some two months he was compelled to give his scheme up.

Yesterday nothing could be learned of Bray in his usual haunts except that it was thought that he had gone to Australia on the mail steamship Moana.

HONOLULU TO HEAR A SWEET SINGER

Miss Cornelia M. Little of San Francisco, and the possessor of a rich, melodious contralto voice, is shortly to give a song recital here. Guests at the hotel have been charmed with her singing, and at various gatherings in Honolulu homes, Miss Little has won her way to a popularity which increases as her audiences grow larger. Her willingness to entertain has widened her circle of friends here, and it is largely due to their importunities that Miss Little has finally consented to appear before a public audience. It is possible that the recital may be given in Progress hall about August 15. Miss Little is the daughter of Chief Engineer Little of the Oceanic steamship Sonoma.

Reception to New Bishop.

A meeting of St. Clement's church congregation was held last evening in accordance with the notice given out in the church on Sunday last, to make arrangements for the reception to be tendered to Bishop Restarick, who is expected to arrive today from San Francisco. The action of the rector in inviting St. Andrew's parish to join St. Clement's church in extending its welcome to the bishop was heartily endorsed, such a reception being more of a general church matter than of individual guilds. A committee of five ladies and three gentlemen was formed to act in concert with a committee to be appointed by St. Andrew's cathedral. The date of the reception will be announced later.

A bill-poster has been sticking notices of down-town firm promiscuously about the city in the past week, and several of the police and fire boxes have been plastered with them. The law is very pointed regarding the use of government property for such a purpose.

There were a great many visitors yesterday inspecting the fine furniture and household effects that are to be sold today at the residence of Dr. H. W. Howard, at 1314 King street, by Jas. P. Morgan. The list of articles to be sold is published elsewhere under the auctioneer's ads.

Supt. McVeigh says that Judge Nathaniel has improved very much since the visit of Justice Perry and the Board of Health to the settlement, and he is now conducting his court as it should be done. There are now 21 men in jail at Kalaupapa, the magistrate imposing jail sentences rather than light fines, which are easily paid.

The Gospel tent, formerly located at the corner of Kinali and Pihai streets, has been moved to School street, Ewa of Fort. The first service will be held Sunday evening, August 10, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, with a song service, followed by preaching at 8. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the meeting.

Copies of Honolulu newspapers received at the Navy Department tell of celebrations and rejoicings held there at the time when the coronation ceremonies of King Edward VII were supposed to be taking place. Honolulu is far away from the rest of the world and beyond cable communication, and the people there were in ignorance of the postponement of the great event. So the English residents made speeches and held processions, games and feasts, all unaware of the shadow that was cast over Great Britain at the time. The United States naval establishment there took no part in the celebration, but only because of an absence of orders on the subject—Washington Star.

Sharks Ate His Arm Off.

The body of a native boy, about eleven years old, who was drowned near the Kalia detention camp, was found yesterday and when the body was brought in its gave evidence that the lad had met his death through sharks. The boy went off with some others to hunt for crabs and as both of the boys arms had been eaten off by sharks it is thought that he had been drawn under by a shark while in the water.

Death of David Trask.

David Trask, a well known ranchman of Lanai, who came to Honolulu to be placed under a doctor's care, died at the home of Albert Trask, his brother, at Kalia at noon yesterday. His body was removed to Williams' undertaking rooms where his relatives watched during last night. The body may be taken to Kauai for burial on Tuesday.
